Haiti aid: Secretary of State Colin Powell urged the international commu nity on Tuesday to rally behind Haiti's new government and help its impoverished people build a stable democratic government with a sound economy.

Opening a donors' conference at the World Bank for the Western Hemisphere's poorest nation, Powell said the task of the participants is "to help the people of Haiti build a future of hope.

He said an international assessment team determined that Haiti needed $1.36 billion through 2006

nber alert: A new technology debuting in 12 states will significantly extend Amber alerts, reaching cell phones, e-mail and handheld computers, and could also be used to transmit weather and terrorism alerts

Starting Monday, police officers in Arizona and Washington were able to send Amber alerts - notifications of a child abduction — from a highly encrypted system in their cars, then update them with photos and more detailed descriptions, Warner said. Ten other states are expected to launch the expanded alerts this summer.

Chicken abuse: An investigator for People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals captured video showing chickens being kicked, stomped and thrown against a wall by workers at a supplier for Kentucky Fried Chicken, which has been under pressure since last year over the treatment of animals.

Officials from Yum! Brands Inc., which owns the fast-food chain, saw the video Monday. Kentucky Fried Chicken "will require that the employee or employees responsible will be terminated," KFC spokeswoman Bonnie Warchauer told The New York Times for a story in Tuesday editions.

KBR investigation: A former employee of KBR, Halliburton Co.'s engineering and construction arm that performs much of its government contract work, has been subpoe-naed by the Justice Department in an investigation of possible overcharges by the company in Iraq.

In a Securities and Exchange Commission filing Monday, Halliburton disclosed word of that subpoena and another seeking information from the company about foreign subsidiaries that do business in Iran.

Whale hunting: Japan proposed hunting nearly 3,000 minke whales a year in the Antarctic, saying whale population ns in the se ern oceans were healthy enough to sustain the losses as it pressed the International Whaling Commission to lift the commercial whaling ban.

Japan has long sought to overturn a 1986 ban on all commercial whaling, and Japan's proposal to allow the hunting of minke whales in the Antarctic came late Monday at the IWC's annual meeting, which, as in past years, has been dominated by the issue.

Kosovo peacekeeping: NATO will maintain its current level of peacekeeping troops in Kosovo, a top general said Tuesday, call ing the ethnically tense province "a top priority" for the Western military alliance.

Gen. Harald Kujat, the chairman of NATO's military committee, said that although the alliance would not be expanding its mission, "Kosovo remains a top priority of our business '

Fischer detainment: The Japanese govrnment is preparing to deport chess legend Bobby Fischer for staying in Japan on an invalid passport, immigration officials said

Fischer was detained at the international airport in Narita just outside of Tokyo last Tuesday after trying to board a flight for Manila. Philippines

Immigration officials, speaking on condition of anonymity, confirmed that Fischer, 61, has been held in their custody since, and said he was being processed for deporta-

Seminary porn: Moving to contain a scandal that has deeply embarrassed the Roman Catholic church, Pope John Paul II appointed a special inspector Tuesday to investi-gate an Austrian seminary where authorities uncovered a vast cache of child pornography.

The pope named Bishop Klaus Kueng, who runs the diocese of Feldkirch in south-western Austria, as an "apostolic visitor" for the embattled diocese of St. Poelten and its ments monument out of the Alahama Judicial Ruilding in Montgomery, Ala., on Monday. The monument has been out of public view for nearly a year after Alabama Supreme Court Chief Justice Roy Moore refused to follow a federal court order to remove it from public view. A federal judge had ruled the prominent public display amounted to an unconstitutional promotion of religion by government. The monument will go on a tour of the Whale hunting: The United States has renewed its call on its longtime ally Jordan to extend immunity to American peacekeep ers against prosecution for war crimes, officials said from both countries said Tuesday. The latest American request came Monday from Lincoln Bloomfield, a U.S. assistant secretary of state, in meetings with se-nior Jordanian officials, including Foreign Minister Marwan Muasher. It echoed similar U.S. requests in recent weeks, Jordanian government snokeswoman Asma Khader told The Associated Press.

Afghan elections: Afghan President Hamid Karzai on Tuesday shifted three of Afghanistan's powerful militia leaders to ci-vilian and police posts in an attempt to keep upcoming elections fair.

The United Nations warns that armed factions could use their guns to sway the outcome of elections, though it says a presidential vote slated for Oct. 9 is less at risk.

Abizaid knocks Syria, Iran on border control. Philippines on pullout

RV ADNAN MALIK The Associated Press

MANAMA, Bahrain - The top U.S. military commander in the Middle East on Tuesday accused Iraq's neighbors Syria and Iran of tolerating cross-border infiltration and meddling by groups bent on further destabilizing a country wracked by violence

In Bahrain, Gen. John Abizaid also expressed regret at the Philippines' hasty withdrawal of its peacekeepfrom Iraq to comply with the demands of militants had who threatened to kill a Filipino hostage warned decisions to anpease terror would backfire and dismissed the hostage-takers' success in forcing Manila to pull out of Iraq a month early as a "temporary victory" that would not last

Abizaid also confirmed for the first time that former Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein was still in Iraq being held by U.S. forces

Abizaid expressed concern that the Syrians were not doing enough to stop border infiltration, a longtime American accusation against Damascus. Syria has said it increased border security but has acknowledged it could not fully secure its long desert border with its eastern neighbor.

There is too much infiltration of money and foreign fighters that takes place across the Syrian border," said Abizaid, head of the Central Command.

Abizaid declined comment on whether there were any Iranian Revolutionary Guards in Iraq, but he said he believes there are elements in Iran that are interfering in southern Iraq.

"I do know there are groups within Iran that want to play a de-stabilizing role in Iraq and I think that would be most unhelpful for Iran and most unhelpful for

The Philippines' pullout, while militarily insignificant, was seen as a victory for insurgents and sparked criticism of Manila by its closest allies "It is regrettable that countries would make decisions that appear to be appeasing terrorists as opposed to standing up to them. Abizaid told reporters.

"All of us know that if you appease terrorism, you will sooner or later fall victim to it or be taken over by it," Abizaid said.

Abizaid played down the impact of the militants' ability to influence the policies of countries.

"I don't think that the coalition is about to fall apart in Iraq and I don't think we will give in to terrorism," he said.

Filipino hostage released

BAGHDAD - A Filipino truck driver held hostage in Iraq for nearly two weeks was freed Tuesday, a day after his nation withdrew its final peacekeepers from Iraq — a move that met the kid-nappers' demands but angered U.S. and Iraqi officials.

Four U.S. Marines were killed in action in separate incidents in Anbar Province, a Sunni-dominated area west of Baghdad, the military said Tuesday.

Two Marines were killed while conducting "security and stability operations" in the province, the military said.

U.S. deaths in Iraq

As of Monday, 890 U.S. servicemembers have died since the beginning of military operations in Iraq in March 2003, according to the Defense Departs ment. Of those, 658 died as a result of hostile action and 232 died of nonhostile causes.

The British military has re ported 60 deaths; Italy, 18; Spain, eight: Bulgaria and Poland, six each; Ukraine, four; Slovakia, three; Thailand, two; Denmark, El Salvador, Estonia, Hungary, Latvia and the Netherlands have reported one death

Since May 1, 2003, when President Bush declared that major combat operations in Iraq had ended, 752 U.S. servicemembers have died — 549 as a result of hostile action and 203 of nonhostile causes.

The Philippines government and the family of Angelo dela Cruz were overjoyed at his release. His wife. Arsenia. burst into tears upon hearing the news in neighboring Jordan. Philip-pines President Gloria Macapagal Arroyo grinned during a televised address in the Philippines.

CAIRO, Egypt - The Islamic militant group blamed for deadly attacks on foreign and local interests in Iraq threatened Japan on Tuesday that car bombs would strike its troops if they were not withdrawn

"To the government of Japan: do what the Philippines has done. By God, nobody will protect you and we are not going to tolerate anybody," said an online statement signed by the Khalid bin al-Waleed Brigade, the military wing of the Tawhid and five were wounded

"Lines of cars laden with explosives are awaiting you; we will not stop, God willing," said the statement, carried by an Islamic forum, known as a clearinghouse for statements by extremist groups.

Japan has dispatched about 500 troops to southern Iraq for noncombat duty to rebuild local schools, provide medical supplies and supply clean water. The military mission, begun earlier this year, is controversial in Japan as its first to a combat zone since World War II.

In April, Japan refused to withdraw its troops after three Japanese were kidnapped by Iraqi insurgents. The three were later released.

But the Philippines gave into kidnappers' demands, withdrawing its 51-mem-ber contingent after a Filipino truck driver was taken hostage. Manila's acquiescence angered Iraqi and American officials, who said it would only encourage the terrorists.

Tawhid and Jihad is considered one of the most dangerous groups fighting coalition forces in Iraq. The group, led by al-Qaida-linked militant Abu Musab al-Zarqawi, has claimed responsibility for attacks on U.S. troops and Iraqi police and security forces that have killed hundreds, as well as the beheading of American, Bulgarian and South Korean hostages.

The group's statement also warned Arab and Islamic governments not to deploy troops to Iraq, naming Jordan, Iran, Turkey and Gulf countries.

"We are warning you for the last time: We will hit with a fist of iron all those supporting the Americans or [interim Iraqi Prime Minister Iyad] Allawi or his cro-nies," the statement read.

173rd Airborne's quick turnaround

Brigade will head to Afghanistan one year after its return from Iraq

BY KENT HARRIS Stars and Stripes VICENZA, Italy - It could be easy to get the impression that members of the 173rd Airborne Brigade aren't fond of their home After all, they always seem to be on the go There are guys here who will have a three-year tour with the 173rd and have two years in com Col. Kevin Owens, the brigade's new commander, said Monday, referring to the unit's upcoming deployment to Afghanistan. After returning from almost a year in Iraq, Owens said, soldiers will have a year back on Caserma Ederle before heading off again to southwest Asia

But it'll be close

Current plans call for the brigade to start deploying in late February or early March. Many of them returned from Iraq during the same time frame this year.

"I had an idea we would be "I nad an idea we would be going back," said Spc. Tim Rogers of Battery D, 319th Airborne Field Artillery Regiment. "But I didn't think it was going to be this quick Not that Rogers, or four other

"It really doesn't bother me," he said. Pfc. Anthony Orr certainly wouldn't mind more time with his wife, Bridget, or his infant daughter, Halee. She was born just a few months before he deployed to Iraq. The couple had been married only a short time before the deployment.

"It was hard starting off with a new family, not being with them at all," he said. "I'm hoping that this time, it'll be easier. Don't count on it, Kathy Wooten Mullah Amanullah, the brother-in-law of the reclusive Taliban leader, was detained early Tuesday morning near Deh Rawod. Omar's home town in Uruzgan province, 250 miles southwest of Kabul, police chief Rozi Khan told The Associated Press.

Khan said Amanullah shot and killed a police commander who stopped his car before he was overwhelmed and arrested.

It was not immediately clear what role Amanullah held in the Taliban movement or if he had any contact with the one-eyed Omar, who could have a large network of in-laws via his four wives

Khan said Afghan authorities might hand Amanullah to American forces, but U.S. spokesman Maj. Rick Peat had no information on his arrest. Uruzgan and neighboring

Base leaders handling budget shortfalls from war on terrorism by cutting out the fat

Stare and Strings

KAISERSLAUTERN. Germanv — At Aviano Air Base, Italy, some airmen have said rivederci" to cleaning contractors and "buon giorno" to sweeping and mopping their office buildings

At RAF Mildenhall, England, airmen can't take the shuttle bus to the operations side of the base anymore

And at Spangdahlem Air Base, aircraft maintainers are lugging their tools by foot along miles of flight line instead of riding in a pickup or van.

All these measures are ways that U.S. Air Forces in Europe base leaders are handling budget shortfalls in fiscal 2004.

Although some base public affairs officials say the shortfall has little connection to the global war on terrorism, some USAFE leaders and base commanders say the war is directly affecting their bottom line.

"I have to make due with less because that money is being spent for war-related costs," said Col. Stephen Mueller, commander of the 52nd Fighter Wing at Spangdahlem, which includes 3,600 airmen in three fighter squadrons and numerous support

With a bit more than two months to go in fiscal 2004, Spangdahlem's operating budget is 27 ercent less than it was last year, Mueller said

USAFE, with five main operating bases and more than 36,000 active-duty airmen, has a fiscal 2004 budget of $1.5 billion. That's about $136 million below the fiscal 2003 budget, said Col. Anthony Thompson, chief of USAFE's Financial Analysis Division. He expects to enter fiscal 2005 with about the same shortfall.

USAFE leaders are hoping that Congress will appropriate contingency funds later this summer to boost base budgets, but there are no guarantees. And, Thompson said, most of those contingency funds would be line-item specific for war costs, giving base com-manders little discretion on how the money is spent "The prospect of not getting any additional funding is very real, and that would cause some real hardships," USAFE spokesman Capt. Rich Komurek said.

Meanwhile, bases are scrimping and saving to make it through the fiscal year

Trimming the fat

Like most USAFE base commanders, Mueller and his troops have found creative ways to stretch their limited dollars

For example, maintenance or repairs on all but mission-essential vehicles, such as aircraft tugs and pallet loaders, are being postnoned.

The policy sometimes puts aircraft maintainers in a bind. Without the passenger vans and pickups they usually rely on to get around the base's lengthy flight line, maintainers have to hoof it. etimes pushing their heavy tool boxes in front of them

'We have a lot of folks who end up walking from aircraft to aircraft to do the job," said Tech. Sgt. Paul Pemberton, program manager for the 52nd Aircraft Maintenance Squadron which renairs and maintains all the wing's -16 and A-10 jets.

"When it's snowing or raining, that can be a real pain," said Pemberton 37 of Atlanta

While the unit has been looking for cost savings for some time, Pemberton said the situation has been "critical" for about three months. As of last week, 18 of the unit's 68 vehicles were parked to save on maintenance costs, he

Mostly, the maintainers are sucking up the extra exercise, understanding that the war takes precedence over personal comfort. But jobs do take longer, Pemberton said

'You can't accomplish the efficiency that you'd like," he said. "In essence, it's a burden. But they do overcome.

Some bases, such as Aviano, are axing "luxuries" such as cleaning contractors, leaving airmen to tidy up their work spaces. Airman 1st Class Daniel Meng a communications security accountant, just finished two-week cleaning detail to mop, sweep and take out the trash at Aviano's 31st Fighter Wing headquarters building.

"At first I didn't like it, but after I started doing it I realized it was important," Meng, 20, said. "I treated it like my regular job.

Higher priorities

The cutbacks reflect the price tag of the global war on terrorism, which has forced bases to spend more money on troop deployments, additional supplies and movement of equipment.

In 2004 alone, Congress has approved $126.1 billion for Iraq, an additional $25 billion headed for congressional approval, according to the Institute for Policy Studies, a Washington, D.C.-based think tank.

"We have focused on the war in Iraq and Afghanistan and getting the very best equipment for the people who are fighting the war," U.S. Rep. Duncan Hunter, R.-Calif., chairmen of the House Armed Services Committee, said during a June 30 visit to Ram-

"Longer term projects that are less relevant to the immediate war fight, some military construction and some things you'd like to have for the comfort of troops in the rear" have been postponed, he said

"For the time being, we think we can handle that." Hunter said. In USAFE, that means luxuries that airmen had come to expect during peacetime, such as unlimited towels in the gym or someone From left. Airman 1st Class Smith Jeter. Staff Set. DEMETRIUS LESTER to take out the trash, are "pushed aside" when the service is on a war footing. Thompson said. 'It becomes a bare-bones base line budget," he said. "It's always mission first: fly or fight. These are war-fighting costs

One Pentagon official said President Bush and Secretary of Defense Donald Rumsfeld are fully aware of the base operating bud-

"It is true that those accounts have not been executed to the predicted budget level because of the war," said Raymond DuBois Jr., deputy undersecretary of defense for installations and environment.

Soldiers' involuntary reassignments to begin

BY LISA BURGESS Stars and Stripes

ARLINGTON, Va. - Some soldiers are about to switch jobs whether they like it or not

Under a long-standing authority called "Involuntary Classification," Army officials are about to exercise their right to tell soldiers they need to take a different job in order to "rebalance the force." Army officials said.

Beginning this week, around 140 soldiers will get a letter informing them that they've been reassigned complete with a date to attend a school for retraining, along with information about whether they will need to pull up stakes and move permanently, or just attend the school in temporary duty status, according to Connie Marche, Chief of the Army's Reclassification Management Branch.

Soldiers should have "at least 90 days notice" of the move. "But it's not optional," Marche said in a Monday telephone interview. "It's an order."

The involuntary reclassification program is necessary because the Army — like the Navy and Air - has too many people doing Cold-War era jobs that aren't relevant to today's missions.

The first reclassification list

The Army reclassification will begin by focusing on sub-ets within five Military Occupational Specialties, or MOSs. The number is the career field; the letter is the subspecialty:

21B — Combat engineer, and 21J, general construc-tions equipment operator, to be reclassified to 21U, topographic analyst. Total affected: 10 soldiers. 74C — Telecommunications Operator — Maintainer, to be reclassified to 25B, information systems operator/ana lyst. Total affected: 50 soldiers. 88K - Transportation watercraft engineers, to be sified to 88K, watercraft operators. Total affected: 15 sol-

- Common Ground Station Operator, and 96R, Ground Surveillance System Operator. Recla MOS and number of affected soldiers unknown.

98H — Communications/Noncommunications Collector. Reclassification MOS and number of affected soldiers

Note: The Army also needs about 110 soldiers to move from 14S, Air Defense Avenger crewmember, and 14R, Air Defense Bradley Linebacker crewmember, to 14J, Air Defense Command Control Communications Computers and Intelligence Tactical Operations Center Operator/Main-

But before the service mandates the moves, soldiers in the J and R Air Defense MOSs will be given a 90-day voluntary period, Army officials said.

The Air Force and Navy are using programs that give first-term airmen and sailors in overmanned jobs a choice of changing to an area where they is a shortage of personnel when it's time to re-enlist. If the members won't do it, they often aren't allowed to re-up.

But those two services can afford to lose members who don't want to change jobs. The Air Force needs to cut 22,000 airmen by Sept. 31, 2005, because it is beyond its authorized end strength, while the Navy intends to reduce its size by 7,900 by the same time, in order to fund future technologies.

The Army, on the other hand, has primary responsibility for missions in Iraq and Afghanistan. With no end to either in sight, the Army can't spare a soul. In fact, Congress has told the Army it needs to add another 30,000 soldiers over the next couple of years. Nevertheless, the Army has tried the volunteer mute too

The Army has not exercised its legal right to tell people to switch without giving them a 90-day volunteer period first since the early 1980s. Marche said.

If enough soldiers don't take the bait, only then has the Army resorted to involuntary assignments.

The problem, Marche said, "is that we've never been too successful with ... [asking] for volunteers We all get comfortable with what we do and don't want to make changes." The initial numbers of involuntary reclassifications are small because the Army needs to make its changes in "low-density" MOSs where you probably have fewer than 1.000 soldiers." Marche said. Nor are the involuntary reclassification soldiers being asked to switch their basic career fields, just their sub-specialties within that field.

"We're only going to do this if you're going to be in the same career field, the logic being it won't be such a drastic change

In those MOSs, "if you have just one more soldier, you can be over strength," she said.

But the involuntary reclassifica-tion program will continue, and always on a small scale, Marche said.

By the end of the year, as many as 700 intelligence soldiers may be ask to shuffle jobs, although the plans have yet to be finalized,

Moving from an over-stressed field to an under-strength job has its advantages, even if it's not by choice. Marche pointed out.

Overfilled MOSs "have stagnant promotion opportunities ... and [a lack] of career-enhancing assignments," which is not the case at all in undermanned areas. she said.

Paving the bills

Mildenhall, home of the busy 100th Air Refueling Wing, is spending more money on equipping troops for war or replacing airmen while they are gone. As of June, $6.8 million - more than 7 percent of the base's operating budget - was spent on war-related costs, base officials said.

That includes such things as $270,000 on "personnel and sup-port items" such as clothing, all-purpose bags and travel. An additional $540,000 went to pay for contracted cooks to replace deployed personnel, and $1.5 million was spent to improve force-protection measures, base officials said in an e-mail to Stars and Stripes.

Lakenheath, England, home of the 48th Fighter Wing, has spent roughly $6.5 million to support worldwide contingencies in fiscal 2004, a base spokesman said. Its fighter squadrons recently returned from a three-month tour in Iraq.

At Aviano, about $31.1 million nearly 17 percent of its operating budget this fiscal year - is going toward war-fighting preparation, equipment, supplies and

Army bases suffer less from war-induced cuts

While Navy and Air Force bases in Europe cope with bud-get cuts and fee hikes to help pay for the Iraq war, the the ater's Army bases haven't suf-fered much. Army officials say. U.S. Army Europe did see its budget trimmed from $2.6 bil-lion in 2003 to $2.2 billion this said Bob Purtiman, a US-AREUR spokesman. But he attributed the reduction almost en-move to Iraq.

The Installation Management Agency-Europe, which oversees base operations in the theater, suffered a budget shortfall of $30 million this year, about 2 percent of its $1.44 billion budget. Millie Waters, an IMA-Europe spokeswoman, blamed the deficit partly on the demands of the Pentagon's commitments in Iraq and elsewhere.

She said the command has frozen hiring but has so far avoided layoffs of temporary employees as had been expected when IMA-Europe announced the cuts in May. Travel and training also has been reduced and some construction projects delayed until after the 2005 fiscal year begins Oct. 1.

But, Waters said, some of the cuts have been offset by extra funds earmarked for the home bases of units — primarily from the 1st Armored Division forced to stay in Iraq for more than a year.

The Hanau, Germany-based 104th Area Support Group al-ready has received $2.6 million, she said, and an additional $9.2 million for other units is expect-temporary duty assignments, base officials said.

And at Ramstein Air Base, $31.7 million of the 435th Air Base Wing's $197.2 million budget is being spent on the global war on terrorism, spokeswoman Darlene Cowsert said.

With no end in sight for the war, USAFE leaders do worry about continuing shortfalls back in garrison.

Further cuts may begin to affect troop morale — a concern the Air Force takes seriously.

"We have not reached that point," Thompson said. "We are not there yet. If we go through another year like this in 2005, and get into 2006 and it's like this then we're building toward im-pacting quality of life." E-mail Marni McEntee at:

ROTC students get first taste of life at sea

ABOARD THE USS ENTERPRISE - In a couple of years, Zach Weinman, 19, will be a naval officer and in charge.

But this summer, he's a petty officer and taking orders

For two months aboard this aircraft carrier, he has lived and worked like any regular, enlisted sailor — mopping the deck, helping pull lines and manning watches on the bridge. Rank might have its privileges, but for now Weinman said being an enlisted sailor - even if only for the summer - is valuable experience

"You learn the enlisted side of things and that's what this cruise is all about," said Weinman, a me-chanical engineering student at the University of

Every year, Naval Academy and Reserve Officer Training Corps midshipmen volunteer to join ships and submarines at sea to get a better idea of what sea life is like and get an up-close look at what enlisted sailors do while under way

Ten college students joined the Enterprise this summer before the carrier deployed to the eastern Atlantic Ocean as part of the Summer Pulse '04 exercise

Lt. Cmdr. Simonia Blassingame, the carrier's training officer, said the cruises often are an eye-opening and humbling experience for the students, who will become commissioned officers after they graduate. It's not unusual for a few to get lost on the 1 123-foot vessel

"Some have never been on a ship before," Blassingame said.

This is no pleasure cruise.

Many of the midshipmen are getting an appreciation for the long hours sailors work. They have their own living spaces, but they eat in the general mess with the enlisted sailors Two midshipmen aboard the Enterprise are serving as division officers in the ship's deck department because the positions are vacant. Monika Goodrich and Amy Haag are taking on more duties than Enterprise is one of seven aircraft carriers participating in Summer Pulse '04. Weinman is an ROTC student volunteering on the ship.

'You see so many different leadership styles' Haag said. "You've seen effective ones and noneffective ones

Academy and ROTC students can go on as many as three cruises designed to deliver a better understanding of the at-sea Navy and Marine Corps.

Midshipmen receive a salary equivalent to that of a petty officer second class for the tour, but they do not have the authority that comes with rank. They are sort of in a "gray area," somewhere between and enlisted sailor and a junior officer.

"We're like half of an ensign," said James Cardwell, 22, a psychology major at Auburn University

While the midshipmen aren't recognized as officers, they said the enlisted sailors and the chief petty officers have gone out of their way to help them. It's probably a good idea that they do, Blassingame said

"You never know," she said. "In a few years, this could be the person they're working for.

Families of USS Cole victims suing Sudan

Pilot who bombed Canadians loses appeal of reprimand

The Associated Press

BARKSDALE AIR FORCE BASE, La. — A U.S. fighter pilot who mistakenly bombed Canadian soldiers in Afghanistan in 2002 killing four and injuring eight, has lost an appeal of his reprimand, officials announced Mon-

Earlier this month, Maj. Harry Schmidt was found guilty of dereliction of duty and was ordered to forfeit more than $5,000 in pay.

Lt. Gen. Bruce Carlson, who handed down the verdict, said in nanded down the verdict, said in a letter of reprimand that Schmidt "acted shamefully" and exhibited "arrogance and a lack of flight discipline" in the April , 2002, bombing.

In his appeal, Schmidt said the reprimand was issued as a "desire to mount a public relations campaign rather than actually attempt to see justice done."

But the Air Force announced

Monday that Carlson had rejected Schmidt's appeal. The case will be forwarded to Gen. Hal Homberg, commander of the Air Force combat command, for a final decision, the Air Force said

Schmidt's attorney, Charles W Gittins, on Monday said he was not surprised by the ruling and does not expect Homberg to decide the case any differently.
"It's in the Air Force's interest to lay the blame at the lowest possible level, not the appropriate level," Gittins said.

If Homberg rules unfavorably, Gittens said he still could petition the Air Force Board for the Cor-rection of Military Record to clear the pilot's name. He could also seek reimbursement in another venue for the withheld wages.

Search for pellet shooting suspect

KAISERSLAUTERN, Germany — German police and U.S. Air Force Security Forces are looking for a black BMW with U.S. military license plates in connection with a spate of pellet-gun shootings in the Kaiserslautern area, a Ramstein Air Base spokeswoman confirmed Tuesday

Three people have been shot since last week by someone riding in a black BMW with U.S. tags starting with the letters "AD," according to an item Tuesday in the German newspaper Die Rheinpfalz. The latest attack was at 11:25 p.m. Friday on Schneiderstrasse in Kaiserslautern, the newspaper reported. A 64-year-old man's arm was lacerated when he was shot, the paper said. Shortly after that incident, someone shot a pellet gun at a couple on Eisenbahnstrasse, but it missed the couple and hit a shop window.

KIEV, Ukraine - Rescuers flooded a shaft at an eastern Ukrainian coal mine with water and nitrogen gas Tuesday in an effort to extinguish a raging fire and resume searching for survi-vors from an explosion that killed 31 miners.

Emergency workers recovered the bodies of 31 miners and were seeking five others in the Krasnolimanskaya mine, where a combination of methane and coal dust exploded about 3,180 feet below the surface Monday evening. Officials were still investigating what sparked the blast.

"We will keep searching," said Deputy Prime Minister Andrey Klyuyev.

More than 50 rescue teams struggled all day Tuesday with raging fires, high concentrations of poisonous gases, heavy smoke and temperatures in the mine tun-nels that reached up to 120 degrees Fahrenheit, said a rescuer who gave his name only as Volodymyr, speaking by telephone from the Donetsk region mine.

"Rocks and debris make our job incredibly difficult ... it's a complete mess down there," Volodymyr said

Fire rescuers started pumping sands of gallons of water and gen, flooding parts of the shaft in an effort to put out the fires. Officials say it could take more than a day to extinguish the blazes.

Mine officials said 48 miners were changing shifts around 9:30 p.m. Monday when the explosion happened. Twelve miners managed to escape unscathed.

Tuesday's explosion is the deadliest mining incident in Ukraine in two years. In July 2002, 33 miners died in a fire and in 2001, 55

At least 267 miners died in Ukraine's mines last year, according to the State Labor Protection Committee, and more than 3,700 have been killed since 1991.

Hitler coup plotters honored at Nazi resistance memorial

BY DAVID RISING The Associated Press

BERLIN - Chancellor Gerhard Schroeder confronted the lingering demons of the Nazi era Tues-day and honored Germany's oft-forgotten resistance movement 60 years after the most famous plot to kill Adolf Hitler, saying that the army officers, civic leaders and ordinary people who usually paid with their lives were heroes

Germans should remember not only Col. Claus Graf Schenk von Stauffenberg, the aristocratic Nazi army officer who tried to kill Hitler with a briefcase bomb placed under their conference table on July 20, 1944, Schroeder said at the World War II army headquarters where Stauffenberg was exe-cuted by firing squad the same night after Hitler survived the

"Tens of thousands of them were deported to prisons and concentration camps, driven into exile or killed," he said. They included labor and church leaders, Social Democratic and Communist politicians, and students.

The high-profile commemorany increasingly sheds the debilitating legacy of the Third Reich, as evidenced by Schroeder's invitaion to D-Day ceremonies in France last month.

In his comments, Schroeder at 60 the first German leader with no personal memory of the war said those Germans who opposed Hitler from the first were members of the resistance, too.

"Resistance against the dictatorship began already in 1933, when the Nazis had seized power," he told the ceremony.

Schroeder said July 20 is a reminder to Germans to "defend again and again the values of free dom and tolerance that we consider so self-evident today.

But the remembrance also underscored the fact that, unlike in countries such as France or the Netherlands, the German resistance never gained popular support for an uprising against Nazi rule.

German President Horst Koe hler laid a wreath during the ceremony at a plaque honoring the July 20 plotters at the Bendlerblock building, now the Defense Ministry. But overnight in the censprayed apparent neo-Nazi slo-gans on a Stauffenberg memorial. police said.

Schroeder said Germans need to keep on asking themselves: "How could the dictatorship rely for so long on a broad mass base? It was not possible for the resistance to mobilize something of a natural patriotism against the National Socialists

Some answers, he suggested, lie in the all-encompassing Nazi po-lice state, the fact that Hitler survived repeated attempts to kill him, and that even the army coup plotters and other elites who ultimately became resistors long wavered between loyalty to the Fuehrer and their conscience.

Later Tuesday, Schroeder was to attend the swearing-in of new German army recruits at the site an annual tradition designed to highlight the importance of the resistance to Hitler from within the military.

Popular culture has given the memory of the German resistance a boost, with a new feature film on Stauffenberg released to coincide with the 60th anniversary, as well as documentaries and books.

London rail project gets government O

BY ED JOHNSON The Associated Press

LONDON - Prime Minister Tony Blair's government on Tuesday supported a new east-west rail link underneath London, but said that it would be a "huge challenge" fund and deliver the $18.5 billion plan.

Transport Secretary Alistair Darling said the plans for the Crossrail project "need to be robust and value for money.'

London Mayor Ken Livingstone would like the project completed by 2012, to support the city's bid to host the 2012 Olympic games. But the British government has said it does not believe it can be completed before 2013.

Darling told the House of Commons that a

The Crossrail project has been discussed for decades, but plans were shelved in the 1990s over cost concerns.

Under the current plan, Crossrail would provide 24 trains an hour in each direction through central London and be capable of carrying 160,000 morning rush-hour passengers.

The government already has committed $285 million to carry out a feasibility study. Plans must be approved by Parliament before work could begin.

Darling said the government would continue to reorganize the rail system, which was broken up and sold to private owners in the mid-1990s. It is frequently criticized for delays, overcrowding, antiquated equipment and creaky infrastructure.

Berger admits taking missing classified documents home for review

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON Sandy Berger. former President Clinton's national security adviser, is under criminal investigation by the Justice Department after highly classified terrorism documents disappeared while he was reviewing what should be turned over to the Sept. 11 commission.

Berger's home and office were searched earlier this year by FBI agents armed with warrants after the former Clinton adviser voluntarily returned some sensitive docu-ments to the National Archives and admitted he also removed handwritten notes he had made while reviewing the sensitive documents

However, some drafts of a sensitive after-action report on the Clinton administration's handling of al-Qaida terror nium celebration are still missing, officials and lawyers told The Associated Press.

Anthrax case continues

FREDERICK, Md. - FBI agents combed laboratory suites at Fort Detrick — home to the Army's biological warfare defense program — on Tues-day, and a source said they were again looking for evidence in the 2001 anthrax attacks

The labs at the U.S. Army Medical Research Institute of Infectious Diseases have been closed since Friday, Fort Detrick spokesman Charles Dasey said.

A law-enforcement source, speaking on condition of anonymity, told The As-sociated Press the activity is related to the anthrax mailings that killed five people and sickened 17 in autumn 2001. FBI agents have frequently visited

Fort Detrick since the unsolved attacks. Debra Weierman, spokeswoman for the FBI's Washington field office, said the lab probe was part of "an ongoing criminal investigation."

Flag-burning amendment

House panel votes to cut environment, NASA to finance veterans health care

DURHAM, N.C. — The front porch conjures up images of rocking chairs, lazy summer afternoons and icy drinks. In election-year politics, Democrats John Kerry and John Edwards are using the setting to reach out to voters in choreographed events with miked candidates and hand-picked audiences.

"The most important thing you can do as a political leader is not to talk, but to listen," Edwards said Monday from the front porch of the split-level home of Durham's Democratic mayor. Bill Bell.

It might have looked as though Sen. Edwards just stopped by for a folksy chat in this leafy, upper middle-class neighborhood in his home

But the neighbors and friends were hand picked. A large camera stand stood on the lawn. Satellite trucks lined the street.

Electrical cables snaked everywhere. Dozens of reporters and photographers were present. A man pushing a lawnmower was stopped by police from getting any closer.

Questions from the neighborhood allowed Edwards to discuss some of his favorite subjects, including education, the loss of U.S. jobs overseas and the swelling federal deficit.

"I don't want to over-promise because President Bush has put us in a ditch. But what we've got to do about it is to work our way out of it. It will take some time," he said on the deficit question.

No one asked, but Edwards also defended himself against fresh claims by Vice President Dick Cheney that the Democrats' opposition to legislation limiting jury awards for medical malpractice contributes to rising health care costs. Edwards, who earned millions as a personal injury attorney before becoming a senator, said Cheney was "dead wrong." BY LAURAN NEERGAARD

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Defibrillators that jump-start a stopped heart may save lives in airports and shopping malls, but few people keep them at home, where most cardiac arrests occur.

Now a manufacturer hopes to spur sales by making the devices as easy to buy as a fire extinguisher, asking the government to lift its requirement that at-home defibrillators be sold only with a doctor's prescription.

It's a controversial issue. Would in-home use of the machines, which cost almost $2,000, save many lives, or instead waste precious minutes if distraught relatives hunted the device instead of dialing 911 first?

"People would be better off spending the money on a health club membership," says Dr. Thomas H. Lee, a Harvard Medical School cardiologist and editor of the Harvard Heart Letter.

Philips Medical Systems, maker of the HeartStart home defibrillator, argues that consumers deserve to decide, but physicians often won't prescribe the easy-to-use devices.

Next week, the Food and Drug Administration's scientific advisers will debate Philips' request for over-the-counter sales.

FDA's chief concern is whether ordinary people can figure out proper use on their own.

"I don't view this as a magical cure for the problem," says Dr. Jeremy Ruskin, Massachusetts General Hospital's cardiac arrhythmia chief, a defibrillator proponent helping Philips' push. "If five of every 100 cardiac arrest victims are ultimately saved, if there's ... widespread availability we will double the existing survival rate." he predicts.

Every year, about 220,000 Americans die of cardiac arrest, where the heart's electrical system goes haywire and heartbeat abruptly stops.

CPR buys some time, but a defibrillator can restart the heart with a jolt of electricity. Every minute the heart is stopped, survival chances drop by 10 percent, and 95 percent of victims die.

Last fall, a study showed that defibrillators in public places can double the chances of surviving

Roughly 80 percent of cardiac arrests occur in the home, where there's less chance of a collapse being witnessed.

Campaign funds still keeping up

Both parties have millions left to spend

BY SHARON THEIMER

WASHINGTON — President Bush's record fund raising approached $230 million as July began, leaving him with tens of millions in the bank and several weeks of private donations to come before he accepts a government check for his general election campaign in early September.

Bush spent roughly $160 million on his re-election effort through June, including about $12 million last month, a campaign finance report he filed Tuesday with the Federal Election Commission showed.

Bush's biggest expenses included ads, accounting for roughly $3 million last month and at least $84 million overall; mail-related costs such as printing, postage and mailing lists, about $4 million in June and $32 million overall; and staff pay, consultants and related personnel costs, about $2 million in June and roughly $15 million total.

The campaign spent nearly $1 million last month and close to $3 million overall on "message phone calls."

Bush, who stopped holding fund-raisers for himself last spring, took in about $13 million in contributions last month and started July with $64 million in the bank.

Democratic rival John Kerry's campaign said earlier this month that he had collected at least $34 million in June through events and other fund raising, boosting his party-record total to more than $180 million. Like Bush, Kerry was to detail his contributions and spending in a report to the FEC due at midnight Tuesday.

When Bush and Kerry accept they are expected to after they are nominated at the party conventions, it will be the only money they can spend on the presidential race from that point on. But it doesn't mean they will be on their own financially.

The Democratic and Republican parties can each spend rough-

$75 million apiece in public money for the fall campaign, as

The Democratic and Republican parties can each spend roughly $16 million in coordination with their presidential nominees, and can pour in unlimited amounts on spending that is independent of the campaigns.

For Democrats, the spending blitz starts after Kerry accepts the party's presidential nomination in Boston on July 29. It begins for Republicans after the convention in New York in early September.

The Republican National Committee has raised at least $217 million this election cycle and started July with $78 million left, while the Democratic National Committee has collected about $125 million and began the month with roughly $63 million on hand. Each plans to rake in millions more before Election Day.

With an eye on making their government checks stretch as far as possible, Bush and Kerry have helped raise tens of millions for their parties over the past several weeks. Their running mates are also lending a hand.

Report: Taxpayer data at risk

BY MARY DALRYMPLE

WASHINGTON — Private contractors revamping Internal Reva nue Service computers committed security violations that significantly increased the possibility that taxpayer information might be disclosed, Treasury Department inspectors say.

An investigation by the department's inspector general for tax administration found that employees working for contractors, or an experienced hacker, could use the contractors' computers to gain access to taxpaver data.

"Our concerns were increased when we could not find documentation that all contractor employees had received background investigations as required," the report said.

Other lapses left the IRS computer system vulnerable to viruses and hackers, investigators

"In summary, a contractor's employees committed numerous security violations that placed IRS equipment and taxpayer data at risk," the report found. "In some cases, contractors blatantly circumvented IRS policies and procedures even when security personnel identified inappropriate practices."

In response, an IRS official acknowledged security problems but said the agency found no evidence to support contentions that there was a big risk that hackers could gain access to IRS computers or that taxpayer confidentiality would be breached.

"We can find no evidence of contractor activities that resulted in unrestricted access to production systems or taxpayer data," Daniel Galik, chief of IRS mission assurance, wrote to inspectors.

"In the absence of documented incidents, we must conclude that much of your assessment is based on theoretical possibilities."

The report comes as Congress considers giving the IRS authority to hire private contractors to collect overdue tax debts, an effort that has some lawmakers and others worried that taxpayer information won't be protected.

AAFES an anachronism?

The post cold-war military drawdown caused significant reductions in customer numbers for the Army and Air Force Exchange Service. The organization lost some of the economies of scale it had en joyed, prices were perceived to be rising and value-for-money falling.

This triggered discussion of whether the concept of AAFES was outdated and whether AAFES provided the most efficient and cost-effective way of providing merchandise for military and retired per-sonnel. A scheme to replace AAFES with malls anchored by a major retailer was dis cussed during the early '90s - one such retailer was, allegedly, drooling at the prospect of gaining so many new customers.

The idea was rejected. It was argued, among other things, that a purely commer cial enterprise would favor its shareholders rather than all the stakeholders - including the customers - and the military folk might be worse off if AAFES were disbanded. The more cynical might have thought that the real reason for the rejection had more to do with protecting senior iobs at AAFES than ensuring that the customers benefited from an efficient service.

I've learned some AAFES "shopping rules" during 25 years or so on various assignments in Europe including "If you see it, buy it - it won't be here next time" and "If you don't like our prices, go on the economy and see if you like theirs." Neither has much to do with providing customer satisfaction. While in Europe, customers are stuck with AAFES, but how many shop at AAFES when they return to the States

The discussion of gasoline prices awakens old memories AAFES claims that it ties the price of gasoline in Germany to that in the United States. The writer of "Gas pricing policy flawed" (June 12) highlighted some of the ridiculous claims made by AAFES. "It costs money to have the gas coupons printed," "... there's not really a lot AAFES can do about that because the prices have gone so high in the States" and the old explanation "it helps us to offset the price of diapers sold" are some of the more feeble excuses.

Gasoline for U.S. forces in Belgium is not provided by AAFES. We use gas cards "charged" with 200 liters that work in ma chines at Total Fina gas stations. Printing gas coupons does indeed cost money, but the gas cards aren't free and Total Fina is not a charitable institution; the price of the card is included in the price of the gas which is considerably lower than AAFES price. The price we pay is the price of the as in Belgium, without Belgian taxes Prices rose earlier this year, but when Belgian prices fell, the price of gas cards fell. On the day prices fell in Belgium, AAFES put up the prices (yet again) in Germany.

The argument that gas prices are high to subsidize the price of other items is bevond belief. Any commercial organization in either the United States or in Europe that tried that argument may as well close its doors. Customers would stop coming. "Robbing Peter to pay Paul" does not sit well with the model of free-market enterprise with which we are accustomed.

If AAFES can't compete with commercial organizations - and the massive disbetween Fina gas prices and those of AAFES suggests it can't - then perhaps it's time to revisit the question of the "suitability" of AAFES. Perhaps the next round of defense cuts could start in Dallas — the home of AAFES - and go on to Virginia Beach, Va., headquarters for the Navy Exchange (the government should be able to get a few dollars for that white elephant.

AAFES appears to be singing from a different sheet of music than that used by commercial retailers, who know that if they don't satisfy customers they will go out of business. If AAFES can't sing a song that appeals to its customers, perhaps it's time to "play it again, Sam.

Paul D. Winder Chievres, Belgium

The price of gas

I am writing in response to the July 5 article "Military gas prices on the rise in Eu-rope." It mentioned that the price is increased over that paid by AAFES in order to cover operating costs, subsidies to keep the prices of other staple products in its stores lower and to cover payments to the Morale, Welfare and Recreation fund

I understand the need for operating costs to be covered, as that is part of the cost of doing business. I am interested in the subsidies for other staple products. Where in the AAFES charter does it state that they shall use their monopoly to gouge the vast majority of their customers for the benefit of the few?

I understand the need to help young families out with certain items that they need for their children and so forth, but I fail to see where AAFES needs to steal from the rest of the community to do this. If shoppers are buying staples through AAFES instead of the commissary, where they are much cheaper, then they need to learn to comparison shop. If the money is being used to support the 24-hour shoppettes, then I suggest that the prices charged be tween 10 p.m. and 6 a.m. be increased by 10 percent so that the cost of this "benefit" is borne by those who avail themselves of it and not the entire community.

I know I can take my business else where if I am not happy with AAFES, and I do. The fact that gas is available on the economy is no excuse to charge outlandish prices for a product we all depend on. After all, AAFES is here to serve the entire community, not just selected segments.

Re-employment blues

With all due respect to the active component, the one problem that they do not have to deal with is the re-employment issue. I am a reservist who is on his fourth deployment in seven years. On the previous deployments, I have had the misfortune of being "terminated" from my job and not offered re-employment upon re-turn from the mission three times. The first time ended with a legal settlement. The second actually had to be filed in the federal court system and along with the financial settlement was the stipulation that I cannot disclose the name of the employer that the suit was filed with But since the suit was filed in a court system, that information is public knowledge and can be obtained by anyone.

This brings me to my current situation. I was mobilized for 12 months after the Sept. 11 attacks. Upon release from active duty, I returned to my employer, the Ford Motor Co. in St. Paul, Minn., and applied for re-employment. I was refused and was informed I had been terminated. For more than three months. I was without an income or insurance benefits for myself and my family. I had to request to be remobilized just to have an income and did another year on Operation Enduring Freedom orders.

Upon return from that year of service, Ford did rehire me. However, it has been 1½ years and I am still pursuing the three months of pay that they owe for not rehiring me, plus some additional benefits they had offered such as pay comp for six months for making less money on active duty than I made at the Ford plant. Ford has yet to respond to my attorney, and at this point this case will be filed in federal court in the next few weeks.

At this time, all I can say is "please do not purchase a Ford vehicle, and if you see my UAW representatives, tell them they are worthless.

Democracy in Iraq

So, the government of Iraq is bringing back executions. And the prime minister is thinking about postponing elections and imposing martial law. I guess democracy is in the eye of the beholder. At least this version of democracy is better than what Saddam Hussein offered

For Stewart, humility is never in fashion

BY SHERYL MCCARTHY Newsday

or a woman as smart and talented as Martha Stewart, it's unfortu-nate that she never learned the value of being able to admit when she's been wrong, to apologize and walk away

Instead after Judge Miriam Goldman Cedarbaum sentenced her to five months in prison and five months under house arrest following her obstruction-of-justice trial, Stewart reacted with righteous indignation

"This is a shameful day," she said outside the courthouse afterward. "Shameful for me and my family and my beloved company and all its employees and partners What was a small, personal matter became an almost fatal circus event of unprecedented proportions.

In other words, shame on the people who prosecuted her, and on the journalists who said nasty things about her, but no shame on herself for thinking she could lie to federal investigators about a stock sale, and get away with it

"I have been choked and almost suffocated during that time," Stewart continued, professing that, through it all, she was more concerned about the others who were hurt by the scandal than she was about herself

If I were Stewart, I would have admitted my unfortunate lapse in judgment, apologized for the misery I caused, and gone qui etly off to prison. She could have been home by Christmas and about to start serving her five months of cushy house arrest in her mansion.

Instead, she has vowed to fight her conviction. As one Court TV reporter pointed out, even if she wins her appeal, she'll have to stand trial all over again. And because there's ample evidence that she did what she was convicted of, she will have wasted a lot more time and money. Better to just Stewart was right to say that the public latched onto her legal troubles with unseemly glee. But she was wrong to dismiss her offense as only "a small personal matter." It was her own hubris in believing she could get away with concocting a ridiculous alibi that led to the huge financial setbacks to Martha Stewart Living Omnimedia and resulted in the layoffs of 200 employees.

Given Stewart's refusal to take responsibility. I was glad Judge Cedarbaum didn't yield to the suggestion that, instead of going to prison, Stewart be allowed to do community service at a women's center in the Bronx, where low-income women make curtains and other household products. Because Stewart can do that kind of thing with her eyes closed, what kind of punishment would that have been?

Stewart's stockbroker, Peter Bacanovic, drew an identical term for conspiring with her. Which leaves Douglas Faneuil, the young broker's assistant who wound up being a pawn in the conspiracy between the two of them. One of the biggest scandals of this case was how Stewart and Bacanovic tried to pin the responsibility for their actions onto this young man, who became the prosecution's chief witness

Barred for life from ever again working in the financial services industry, Faneuil deserves nothing harsher than probation.

Stewart vowed that she'll "be back." She urged people not to shup her company's products because of what happened to her.

And, in fact, after the sentencing, her stock rose 37 percent. I glanced at a stack of "Martha Stewart Living" magazines on a colleague's desk. Sure enough, they were fabulous, filled with photographs of magnificent home furnishings and table settings and food that looked so good I wanted to eat it off the pages.

'Our magazines are great." Stewart had pleaded. "Our products are great. They deserve your support."

They were the truest words she said that

Ambassador bears no good will toward president

oseph C. Wilson IV's shattered credibility illustrates much of what is wrong with the CIA, and with "main-stream" journalism.

Wilson's 15 minutes of fame began July 6

2003, when he accused President Bush of twist-Jack Kelly ing the truth when he said in his State of the Union address that January: "The British government has learned that Saddam [Hussein] recently sought significant quantities of uranium in Africa " Wilson a former ambassador to Gabon, said he knew this wasn't true because in February 2002, the CIA had sent him to Niger to determine whether that African country had sold "yellowcake" (lightly enriched uranium ore) to Iraq. After spending eight days "drinking sweet mint tea and talking with dozens of people," he concluded that Niger had not.

Wilson's fame soared when columnist Robert Novak disclosed that a Bush administration official told him that Wilson had been selected for the Niger mission at the recommendation of his wife, CIA officer Valerie Plame. He was a frequent guest on television news shows; the subject of a fawning profile in Vanity Fair magazine; awarded a lucrative book deal, and became an (unnaid) foreign policy adviser to Sen. John Kerry. On July 9, the Senate Select Committee Intelligence issued its report on the CIA's pre-war intelligence on Iraq. The SSCI concluded that:

■ Wilson lied when he denied his wife had gotten him the Niger assignment. "Interviews and documents provided to the Committee indicate that his wife ... suggested his name for the trip.

■ Wilson lied when he said his report "debunked" Bush's charge that Saddam Hussein was seeking uranium from Africa. "For most analysts, the information in [Wilson's] report lent more credibility to the original CIA reports on the uranium deal

■ Wilson lied when he told The Washington Post he knew the Niger intelligence had been based on documents that had been forged. The CIA didn't obtain the document alleged to be a forgery until eight months after Wilson had returned from Niger, "Committee staff asked how the former ambassador could have come to the conclusion that 'the dates were wrong and the names were wrong' when he had never seen the CIA reports and had no knowledge of what names and dates were in the reports."

On July 14, the Butler Commission issued its report on Britain's pre-war intelligence. It concluded there was ample evidence that Saddam tried to buy uranium from Niger and other African countries, and that Bush's statement to that effect in his State of the Union address was "well-founded"

Wilson's charges against President Rush

The Senate Intelligence Committee criticized the CIA's sloppy work in investigating the Saddam/Africa/uranium connection. All of its information came from foreign intelligence services

Aside from Wilson's tea-drinking expedition, the CIA itself made little effort to gath er information on this potentially critical topic. When the Navy received a report from an African businessman that uranium from Niger was being stored in a warehouse in Cotoneau, Benin, the CIA didn't bother to check it out. Some in the CIA may have been more interested in dismissing reports of an Irag/Niger connection than in finding out if they were true. Valerie Plame told Senate investigators she told her husband "there's this crazy report" on a purported deal for Niger to sell uranium to Iraq.

If we're to win the war on terror, we need a CIA that is more interested in finding out what is going on than in reinforcing the prejudices of some analysts, and a news media that is more interested in finding the facts than in shilling for the Democratic Party. Jack Kelly is the national affairs writer for the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette and the Toledo (Ohio) Blade. A former Marine and Green Beret, he was deputy assistant secretary of the Air Force in the Reagan administration. His column appears wee

Test-driving your fridge

Retailers reach out to shoppers with in-store testing

BY MICHAEL BARBARO The Washington Post

WASHINGTON - Falling in love with the new Jenn-Air convection oven but unsure whether it can handle a 25-pound turkey? Maytag Corp. has a novel idea:

Bring in the bird and cook it As part of a new program, the company is encouraging consumers to test-drive appliances before buying them. Shoppers can throw in a load of laundry, wash dirty dishes and bake their favorite din ners. There's even a package of cookie dough on hand in case people forget to bring their own.

'Try it before you buy it" used to apply to cars, clothes and sporting goods.

Now it's weaving its way into such major household purchases as refrigerators and TiVo. National retailers, fighting low-priced discounters and the Internet, say the strategy is giving them a much-needed edge.

It's proving a powerful tool in selling appliances and electron ics, complex gadgets whose technical-sounding and price-increasing distinctions — higher resolution, extra gigabytes, more pixels - can easily be lost on consum-

One major target of the effort: women. They make the most household purchases but are more interested in understanding how a product will fit into their lives than hearing a salesman tick off its bells and whistles, execu-

Maytag has opened 41 stores with the new format and plans 50 more this year. "You don't buy anything else at that price without testing it out, and we don't think an appliance should be any different, said Jill Spiekerman, a company spokeswoman.

Best Buy Co. is rolling out stores featuring mock rooms, each filled with chairs, lamps, rugs and thousands of dollars worth of electronics. Salespeople encourage shoppers to kick off their shoes and watch satellite TV on wide-screen plasma monitors.

James Damian, a senior vice president at Best Buy, said multiple product and service sales have risen sharply in stores with the mock rooms "It's kind of like going to the Ralph Lauren Polo store," Damian said. "They are selling you a wardrobe, not just a shirt. Before now, big box retailers have never done this.

Retailers say interaction sells. Whirlnool Corp.'s 12.000-square-foot studio store in Atlanta, shoppers spend an average of two hours each turning knobs and pushing buttons. Afterward, 90 percent of them buy a Whirlpool appliance, the companv said.

"I think we are going to see a lot more of this." said Raymond Burke, a professor at Indiana University's Kelley School of Business, who predicts the trend will help cons imers sift through a crush of nearly identical devices. "This is an overdue way to communicate what makes a product unique !

In a study of 1.000 consumers. the Retail Industry Leaders Association recently found that between 75 and 80 percent leave a store without making a purchase because of an inability to find products or differentiate between them.

Some high-end boutiques, such as Bang & Olufson, have been encouraging consumers to test-drive their goods, but executives credit the success of Ikea. the Swedish purveyor of trendy assemble-your-own rooms, with generating the current interest in this approach. The company devotes about 25 percent of its floor space to fully furnished — and where electricity is required, functioning - rooms showcasing Ikea products and some non-Ikea appliances. Watching movies on PC big screen

Q. We just bought a new PC with Windows XP Home Edi-tion and, for the life of me, I cannot get it to display any of my home movie files as full-screen showings. When I click on the command for full screen, the videos are displayed in a window that takes up the whole screen, but it also has silver bars for com-mands on the top and bottom. Surely, I am missing something.

— Sharon Easton

A. Surely, you are missing something, Ms. E. It's a buried command in Windows Media Player that in new machines often isn't properly selected for showing raw movie format like AVI, MPG and so on. Open the Media Player, go to the Tools item and then select the Options command in the menu that appears. Next, in the box this summons, select the Performance tab. Open it and click on the Advanced button. In the display this creates, remove the check from the two boxes on the right-hand side dealing with 'full screen" in the title.

I can speculate that Microsoft programmers left that silver command bar on the bottom because it gets used in playing blockbust er-type DVDs that have their own full-screen and letterbox settings. Surely, they goofed.

Q. To get to the spyware repair site that I need to use, you must start the address with a tilde. How do you create one on the computer keyboard? Richard J. Ross @comcast.net A. I recommend holding down the Shift key and then tapping the tilde key (~), which is locat-ed on the key next to the numer-al 1 just above the alphabet on andard keyboards. You are far from alone in this confusing situation, Mr.

Ask Jim The tilde amounts to a punctuation mark that is used commonly in languages including Spanish and Portuguese, but hardly ever employed in English. When it is used in an English expression, like "Coates is ~correct." it would mean that the statement is approximate rather than certain. People in the sciences use it, as do mathematicians, to connote things like ~10 grams or ~750 milliliters. Precisely because it is rare the tilde was adopted by the writers of the original Unix hypertext markup language that creates

Web sites as a way to reserve part of a larger site to a sub-Many Internet service providers used the tilde to designate a customer's private site, as in www.serviceprovider.com/

But too many Web authors use it in the address of subheadings on sites designed for the public, creating no end of confusion.

Diamond heist

MIAMI — Ten masked gunmen beat and robbed two Israeli salesmen of more than $800,000 in diamonds during a well-organized day-time robbery at a Miami gas station, police said.

The salesmen had finished pumping gas into their car Thursday morning when their exit was blocked by a Ford Mustang, a pickup and a van. Ten men climbed out of the vehicles holding weapons and wearing masks and surrounded the salesmen's car.

Miami police said.

The gunmen took several items, including the cache of diamonds, before escaping.

The New York-based salesmen, identified as Efrain Sade, 39, and Shai Barbi, 30, were traveling around Florida delivering diamonds to businesses

Official pleads innocent

HI HONOLULU — A city wastewater official has pleaded innocent to theft and bribery charges for allegedly ordering city workers to do work at a private residence on city time and using city resources.

Harry Hauck III and Jay Gonsalves were indicted for an incident between July and August 2001. Both are supervisors at the Kailua Wastewater Treatment Plant.

Hauck pleaded not guilty on Thursday.

Several employees from the Kailua plant alleged they were ordered to install or repair a water sprinkler system on two consecutive weekend at the Kailua home of Gonsalves' mother while on city overtime and using supplies from the city storeroom.

Machete attack charges

MA BOSTON — An East Boston man was ordered held on $2,000 bail on Friday after pleading innocent at his arraignment to striking another man several times with a machete, severely cutting the victim's head.

Mario Cruz, 46, was arraigned on charges of assault and battery with a dangerous weapon, assault with a dangerous weapon and leaving the scene of an accident for his alleged role in Thursday night's incident.

Police responding to a report of an assault in progress found the victim covered in blood with cuts to his head. He was taken to Massachusetts General Hospital.

The victim's name has not been released.

A witness told police that the suspect hit the victim several times in the head with a machete, then used a baseball bat to threaten two people trying to help the victim, according to the Suffolk district attorney's office.

Glitch means free drugs

MINNEAPOLIS — A health maintenance organization is still trying to calculate its losses after a computer programming glitch told pharmacists to give thousands of Minnesota retirees free generic prescriptions.

Retirees accepted the freebie for several days before a retired

The problem started when Medica Health Plans gave a one-time offer to any of the 3,501 seniors enrolled in its Medicare-supplement insurance plan, Medica Prime Solution, who also had purchased a prescription drug rider. Starting July 1, Medica agreed to pay for those switching from 21 brandname drugs to generics.

But with the retirees, a computer programming error mistakenly assured pharmacists that all 28,261 enrollees in Prime Solution qualified for the free generic drugs.

Felonious flowers

CLIFTON — Police said they uncovered a ring of heroin smugglers who saturated cardboard flower boxes with $1 million worth of a liquid form of the drug.

After flying the rose-packed boxes into Kennedy International Airport, the smuggler would have extracted the heroin from the cardboard and sold it, authorities said.

"How suspicious are you going to be of boxed flowers?" police Detective Sgt. Patrick Ciser said Thursday.

Two New Jersey men from Colombia, Juan Cortez Arias and John Rivera, were arrested Tuesday and charged with drug offenses. They were being held without bail. Federal authorities were still investigating.

The flowers were shipped from Ecuador; the heroin may have come from Colombia, said Capt. Robert Rowan.

Kindness not repaid

CA CONCORD — Justo Ramirez had a soft spot for the needy.

According to friends, the former San Francisco garbage man was particularly generous with a drifter he allowed to live at his apartment complex and eat at his small taqueria across the street in exchange for doing odd jobs.

But police said that Ramirez, 53, was stabbed to death by the man he had helped, 38-year-old Aurelio Diaz, after refusing to give him a small amount of money.

Ramirez died on the floor of his newly opened restaurant, Don Justo, as his girlfriend screamed for help. Diaz fled but was soon arrested, police said.

Friends said the dispute was over $25.

What a load of bull

NE MADISON — Are Nebraskans ready for bull fries? Jackie Williams, of Valentine, is the proprietor of the portable Pota-

Jackie Williams, of Valentine, is the proprietor of the portable Potato Hut at this year's Madison County Fair and Rodeo. She says even when people find out what the fries really are — bulls' testicles — nine out of 10 fair-goers still want to do a taste test.

True bull-fry lovers can go for a whopping half-pound, 10-piece serving of bull fries included on the menu of the Potato Hut, which Williams co-owns and runs with her husband, Dustin.

And there's more than just novelty to the fries, according to Williams.

"Bull fries are all beef and one of the leanest meats on the market," Williams said. "They're 100 percent cholesterol-free."

Sheepish about selling

CHAMPAIGN — It's a little smelly after 89 years of housing sheep, but for anyone intrigued by turning old barns into stylish homes, the University of Illinois has a one-of-a-kind offer.

The school is moving its South Farms agricultural facilities, but it won't be taking along the 1915 sheep barn with its unique gambrel roof

Rather than demolish it, the university and the Illinois Historic Preservation Agency are offering to donate the barn to someone willing to move and rebuild it.

The 90-foot-by-35-foot barn has housed only sheep since 1915, so it stinks a little, admitted Kevin Duff, a UI planner. But it is in good structural shape, and the gambrel roof makes the building an architectural wonder.

The university is taking proposals until Aug. 11 from anyone willing to take the barn down by mid-September and move it to another location. Duff said.

Don't blame the cooks

NC LEXINGTON — Barbecue apparently is not to blame for the polluted air in Davidson County.

Local officials complained after the county was found not to be meeting federal standards for fine particle pollution, saying the location of a monitoring device near a barbecue restaurant and railroad crossing could be to blame.

The state added two air quality monitoring devices in other locations. Tim Mather, spokesman for the Division of Air Quality, said Friday that initial readings show even air that is far away from barbecue joints is too dirty.

Mather said particulate matter

Cremation mystery

BRATTLEBORO — Thirty years after Ray Smith's remains were cremated in Massachusetts, his ashes have shown up at a local cemetery.

"We're just trying to find out where Ray's been for the past 30 years," said Brattleboro Police Capt. Steven Rowell. when officials unlocked the cemetery gate. They were in a cardboard box; inside was a death certificate for Smith, who was born in Dover and whose family had a plot at the cemetery.

Smith died in 1974 at the age of 66. Following his death, a service for Smith was held at the now-defunct Allen Funeral Home in Malden, Mass, said Rowell. Smith's body was then taken to the Woodlawn Crematorium in Everett, Mass. His remains were later picked up by an unidentified party.

Investigators don't know where Smith's remains went after his cremation, Rowell said.

Wrong blood type used

SARASOTA — A patient died after receiving the wrong blood type during a transfusion, but hospital officials said it has not been determined whether the mistake killed her.

"It was a medical error, but we don't know if it was the cause of death," said Dr. Duncan Finlay, chief executive of Sarasota Memorial Hospital. He blamed the mistake on a mislabeled blood sample.

The woman died late last month, about a day after the transfusion, but the hospital has not released her name, age or her condition.

Hospital spokesman Mike Vizvary said an internal investigation was continuing, but administrators have not taken action against anyone involved. The state also will investigate.

Ticket scam uncovered

NEW YORK — A federal airport screener has been charged with stealing more than $55,000 in a ticketing scheme by charging passengers adult fares but reporting them as lower infant prices and pocketing the difference, prosecutors said.

Laura Chico-Moreira. 37. of Ozone Park, Queens, allegedly operated the scheme while working as an independent travel agent for XLJE Tours. Chico-Moreira is also an agent for the Transportation Security Administration.

She was charged with grand larceny and falsifying the business records of Grupo Taca Airlines, a Miami-based airline that serves South and Central America, between December 2002 and June 2003, Queens District Attorney Richard Brown said Thursday.

Brown said Chico-Moreira sold dozens of full-fare adult tickets to her customers but reported to the airline that the tickets had been booked for infants.

Jordan Lee Parker died of massive head injuries at the family's home, said Nacogdoches County Sheriff Thomas Kerss. The pit bull, which had no history of aggressive behavior, had been tussling with another pet, a smaller terrier, when it attacked the boy, Kerss said.

He said the boy's grandmother was trying to separate the animals when the dog grabbed the child by the head. Kerss said the dog freed the child within seconds, but Jordan was dead by the time authorities arrived.

Rapper Jadakiss, seen here at the 2002 Billboard R&B/Hip-Hop Awards, is slamming President Bush for the Sept. 11, 2001, attacks in his new song "Why?"

Jadakiss blames Bush for 9/11

BY NEKESA MUMBI MOODY

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Over the years, the rapper Jadakiss has depicted a world of drug dealing, murder and other assorted mayhem without raising many eyebrows.

But seven words in his new song "Why" — "Why did Bush knock down the towers?" — has gotten Jadakiss the most mainstream attention, and criticism, of his career.

"It caught the ear of white America," he said proudly during a phone interview with The Associated Press. "It's a good thing. No matter what you do, somebody's not going to like it, but for the most part, most people love the song."

Not everyone loves it. Bill O'Reilly called Jadakiss a "smear merchant" this week, and some radio stations have edited out the line in the song, in which Jadakiss talks about perceived injustices, conspiracies and problems affecting the world. MIV says it is playing an edited version of the video, as it was sent by his label, Intersome.

Jadakiss says fans have demanded to hear the original version.

"In the beginning, they would edit, but after that, everybody called back for the version that was calling Bush [out]," he says.

Jadakiss doesn't really believe Bush ordered the towers destroyed — he says the line is a metaphor, and that Bush should take the blame for the terrorist attack because his administration didn't do enough to stop it.

"They didn't follow up on a lot of things properly," says Jadakiss. "It's the president of the United States. The buck stops with him."

The controversy doesn't appear to be hurting Jadakiss —his new album, "Kiss of Death," released last month, is nearing 500,000 copies sold. However, his song "Why?" has stalled at No. 16 on Billboard's Hot R&B/Hip-Hop Singles chart.

Ronstadt booed for 'Fahrenheit 9/11' plug

LAS VEGAS — Singer Linda Ronstadt not only got booed, she got the boot after praising filmmaker Michael Moore and his new movie "Fahrenheit 9/11" during a performance. Before singing "Desperado" for an encore Saturday

Before singing "Desperado" for an encore Saturday night, Ronstadt called Moore a "great American patriot" and "someone who is spreading the truth." She also encouraged the audience at the Aladdin hotel-casino to see the documentary about President Bush.

Ronstadt's comments drew loud boos, and some of the 4,500 people in attendance stormed out of the theater. People also tore down concert posters and tossed cocktails into the air.

"It was a very ugly scene," Aladdin President Bill Timmins told The Associated Press. Timmins, who is British and was watching the show, said he didn't allow Ronstadt back in her luxury suite afterward and she was escorted off the property.

Ronstadt's antics "spoiled a wonderful evening for our guests and we had to do something about it," Timmins said. Ronstadt, 58, had been booked to play the Aladdin for only one show.

The misunderstood world of Ethan Hawke

'Before Sunset' actor speaks candidly, and pays for it

BY PHIL VILLARREAL

Arizona Daily Star

- Studio makes actor give interview to promote film. Actor breaks from drab-answer mold and unspools honest thought
- Press cuts honest thought up into embarrassing sound bite
- Sound bite zips around the world and makes actor come off as self-aggrandizing buffoon elcome to the world of Ethan Hawke.

Hawke, open and earnest in a phone interview in support of "Before Sunset," groaned when a reporter brought up his comments from the March issue of Details magazine:

"Martin Luther King Jr. suffered from infidelity: so did John F. Kennedy. You're more likely to find great leadership coming from a man who likes to have sex with a lot of women than one who's monogamous

The quote became a gossip-column highlight. Even more negative press was heaped on Hawke, who was already suffering in the media because of accusations of infidelity and news of his divorce with Uma Thurman, his wife of six years.

'It was taken out of context, like I was comparing myself to the people I mentioned. MLK and Jack Kennedy, Clinton, all kept their marriages together, for crying out loud," Hawke said. "I know my place. I'm an actor. I'm not comparing myself to these guys. These are cool men, and the idea that we should judge a leader on fidelity is irritating."

Hawke, 33, is a thinker and a talker, and sometimes the talking gets him in trouble.

The talking, though, makes Hawke what he is as an actor. A master at relaying intellectual curiosity and suppressed emotion through the spoken word. Hawke tends to end up in films that feature conversation at the forefront. At the extreme, his movies involve almost all talking and little to no action.

The romantic paragon "Before Sunrise" (1994) features Hawke as Jesse, an American who spends one night getting to know Celine (Julie Delpy), a French student, and begins a spontaneous conversational love affair. The similarly talky "Before Sunset," just out, is a real-time secuel to that film, set nine years later, in which Jesse and Celine have a chance reunion and walk the streets of Paris together for a little more than an

Now that Hawke's divorcing, he's moved into an apart-ment in New York's art-fueled Chelsea neighborhood.

"It's an attempt for me to reconnect with myself, I think." Hawke said.

Reconnecting, Hawke said, also means spending time with some of his best friends, including Delpy and director Richard Linklater. Hawke co-wrote the screenplay for "Before Sunset" with both of them.

Linklater, who lives in Hawke's birthplace of Austin. Texas, has directed him five times. Hawke needed no persuading to hook up with his favorite director again to make "Before Sunset."

"The movie felt so personal to me. I love Rick and Julie so much, and it felt like a real gift to be able to make it. I tried not to take one moment for granted,' he said

Hawke critiques other fellow members of the "Austin Mafia" — indie filmmakers, including himself, Linklater, Quentin Tarantino and Robert Rodriguez, who have roots there

"I like those guys perfectly well. If you compare Rick and Robert Rodriguez, they're all in the same generation. 'El Mariachi,' 'Slacker' and 'Reservoir Dogs' all came out within two years of each other. What Rick is interested in and what Ouentin and Robert are interested in are polar opposites

"I know Quentin pretty well. My wife of five years had a collaboration with him, with 'Kill Bill,' that was incomparable.

The "Kill Bill" reference leads to uncomfortable territory, because it was during the making of that project that rumors of Hawke's marriage deteriorating started to arise. British tabloids and American rumor columns reported that Hawke believed Thurman was romantically involved with Tarantino on the set of "Kill Bill" in China, while Hawke's alleged infidelity with model Jen Perzow took place while he was filming "Taking Lives" in Canada. If Hawke's affair happened - and Hawke has denied that it did - he's got to answer a burning question: Why wait until your wife has undergone extensive samurai sword training to sleep around?

"It's a funny joke and you can use it in your story," Hawke said in a shaky voice, "but that's assuming one thing - that I committed infidelity. ... You probably don't know what you're talking about.

"I will say," Hawke continued with a chuckle, "that Uma is a formidable and powerful human being, whether or not she had sword training.

Aerobatic champion Patty Wagstaff was inducted into the National Aviation Hall of Fame in Dayton, Ohio, happy to have witnessed women's increased role in aviation.

"I didn't know any women pilots, so I looked up to entertainers like Peggy Lee, said Wagstaff, the first woman to win the ILS National Aerobatic Championships "Now it's wide open" for women in aviation

In Saturday night's induction ceremony, Wagstaff joined three others as new inductees: former Apollo astronaut William Anders, who circled the moon in 1968; the late Harriet Ouimby, the first American woman to receive a pilot's license; and the late Jack Ridley, who was flight test engineer for Chuck Yeager's record-setting supersonic flight in 1947.

Horoscope

It's the last full day of the sun's journey through Cancer.

Hopefully, all the cocooning of the past few weeks has been rejuvenating. Home never felt so cozy. Spend some time there, gratefully accepting all those belongings in our surroundings that simu late security and comfort. Of course, the real comfort comes from inside

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (July 21). Your accomplish ments are impressive this year. If you keep working steadily, you'll have your debts paid by October.

August features public acknowledg ment. Education is part of the fall, and singles will meet a dream part ner in a school-like setting. Love starts tenderly but gets wildly passionate as winter rolls near. Lucky love signs are Capricorn and Virgo

ARIES (March 21-April 19). You're sure of who you are, and evervone wants to be near someone like that! Numerous offers have you feeling like the most popular person on Earth. But at some point, it's more hectic than fun. Plan some time to slow down

TAURUS (April 20-May 20). Though you're not usually one to follow any subject considered to many to be frivolous, new interests will surprise you and shake up your usual sensibility. Loved ones bond by venturing into strange territory together

GEMINI (May 21-June 21).

You're not only in a loving mood; you're in an adoring mood that verges on co-dependency. This is a good day to reinforce to yourself that your future happiness is not hinging on one particular person. Exert your independence.

CANCER (June 22-July 22). It's a day of contradictions. You'll be chuckling inwardly, and your amuse ment seems to give the world more dimension and life. What you see is probably not what you get, but in time, what you get could prove more LEO (July 23-Aug. 22). The colors of your world may seem to be repeating in an endless bland pattern. It's definitely time to change things. If you've been considering travel, now is the time to do it. You'll find kindred spirits along your path VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). You're tempted to take a leisurely pace, but cementing business alliances before noon will produce a happy bank account! Exercise! The hardest part is the first 10 minutes. Get past that.

and you're on your way. LIBRA (Sept.

23-0ct. 23). You're feeling open minded and not tied to seeing things one way or the other This is a perfect day to look at art or listen to music - you may have an epiphany! Financially, this is a powerful day when results are immediate SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21). Celebrate your friendships and all they bring to your life. Your tight bonds may produce predictable outcomes, but it's never boring, Open communication brings new trust. Tonight, pen diary notes and random musings.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). You magnetize what you want, though you might not consciously know what that is. Do some soul searching! Sagittarius people traditionally want what they can't have, so try to be more realistic and hon-

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). Reality sets in soon enough, so indulge yourself in the creative fluff around the edges of real life. At work, you may feel you're navigating a political obstacle course and having to use your most diplomatic instincts as a guide. AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18).

After a bout of waning motivation, you're ready to kick into a higher productivity bracket. Social participa tion will be key to getting your drive back. You are marvelous at entertaining, and your talents are in high demand

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20). It may be easier for you to focus on your fantasies and projections than your reality. When memory clouds and the details fall away, all that remains is a feeling. It's truly a time when you can re-write history.

Dear Abby: I have been seeing a psychologist for three years about anxiety and the trauma of my parents' divorce.

Every session has been about how school is and whatnot About a year ago, I had my first real relationship. We are still involved. In a recent session, my psychologist asked me how my sex life is. Mind vou, I'm only 18, I felt very embarrassed and told him it was none of

and she turns up her nose when something is served and makes even look good - what's in it?"

The one we have heard all too often is, "That doesn't even sound good."

Most of the time we try to please her by preparing something she likes, like hot dogs or fried chicken.

Frankly, I'm sick of it. Would it be rude to prepare something scrumptious like coconut shrimp with orange sauce knowing that she won't eat it, but everyone else will, and tell her there are hot dogs in the fridge and buns in the breadbox and to just help herself?

- Had it in Nashville Dear Had it: No more rude than what she's doing to you. The alternative would be to tell her in advance what you will be serving so she can opt out or bring her

Dear Annie: 1 just left my job of 16 years after being bullied by two female coworkers for two years. I had items thrown at me, doors slammed in my face shoulders "accidentally smacked into mine as they walked by, and all my personal items rear nged while I was sick at home

The leader of these bullies is in her late 50s and the other one is over 40. I cannot understand why anyone would want to make the workplace so miserable. I tried turning the other cheek, but when my blood pressure became danger ously elevated, and my blood sugar dropped me into uncon sciousness on several occasions, I decided I'd had enough and retired — much sooner than I had planned.

I gave up a nice pension in order to get out with my health and sanity intact. There were at least two written complaints filed and countless verbal complaints made to management, with no pleas for intervention? I am not sure that I am strong enough emotionally for a long, legal battle, but I hate to see them get away with this abuse. - Ex-Law Enforcement Civilian in Sacramento, Calif. Dear Sacramento: Are these juvenile women still in grade school? Ask your doctor to refer you to a counselor who will help manage your stress levels, and then talk to a lawyer. Even if you are unable to handle a legal battle, the mere threat of a lawsuit is often enough to get results Dear Annie: A few months ago, I celebrated my 19th birth day by inviting a dozen or so people out to dinner. I discussed it with a few close friends, and we decided that everyone would buy their own meal. I chose a nicer restaurant than we would usually go to, but it wasn't terribly expensive I enjoy your column and know that you feel it is inappropriate to invite people out and then hand them a check. And I agree. But we are all college students, and none of us can afford to treat the others. I bought everyone appetizers and supplied the dessert at the end of the evening, but I still wonder if it was enough. Was I an inconsiderate hostess, or was it appropriate given the age group and casualness? - Seeking Your Approval in Dallas Dear Dallas: Here's the way it works — you don't surprise your guests with an invoice. If they know beforehand that they each will be picking up their own tab and they agree with the venue, it is perfectly OK to split the bill. Annie's Mailbox is written by Kathy Mitchell and Marcy Sugar, longtime editors of the Ann Landers column. War Is Tough on Families

Military life has enough challenges without worrying about how your loved ones will contact you... especially during times of conflict. I know, because I grew up in a military family and served as a Navy Admiral.

You can count on the American Red Cross to help you wherever you go. Whether you're at sea, or on an installation, we can help your loved ones back home get messages to you, or from you, in case of emergency. We can also help you through counseling and other needed assistance.

The Red Cross was there for my family, and we'll be there for yours. In fact, we support thousands of military families each year.

For more information, or to learn how you can help, please contact your local Red Cross or visit www.redcross.org. Thank you.

"It's the worst game we've played all year," the Red Sox's Johnny Damon said.

The Red Soy remained seven games behind the Yankees, 9-7 losers in Tampa Bay, in the AL

"This is a bad feeling," Damon said, "We shouldn't have been in this situation. We were just awful. There isn't much more you can say about it. Every game is important for us. We had a chance to pick up a game on the Yankees today and let it slip through our fingers."

Boone hit his fifth career grand slam on an 0-1 count from Curtis Leskanic (1-5), the fifth Boston pitcher, a 392-foot shot into the Seattle bullnen in left field. The Mariners loaded the bases on a single by Olivo and walks to Dave Hansen and Randy Winn

Braves return to a familiar place

Atlanta tops Philly to move into first

BY PAUL NEWBERRY The Associated Press

ATLANTA - The Atlanta Braves have finally made it back to a familiar position.

Winners of 12 straight division titles, the Braves gained sole possession of first place in the NL East for the first time this season with a 4-2 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies on Monday night. Mike Hampton gave up two runs and five hits in seven innings, and Atlanta's defense made several spectacular plays, including shortstop Rafael Furcal's leaping catch of David Bell's liner to end the game. Bell slung away his bat in frustration, nearly hitting home plate umpire Tim Timmons.

The Braves won for the 16th time in 20 games, breaking a tie with the Phillies for the top spot. "They smell blood every time they take the field," said Philadelphia manager Larry Bowa, his team falling out of the division lead for the first time since June 27. "They don't win by accident."

Despite their impressive pedigree, it's a little surprising to find the Braves in this position. After all, they went through a major sal-

The Phillies and World Series champion Florida Marlins were supposed to be the new powers in the East, but it appears that first in this division still goes through a familiar place - Atlanta.

On the mound, Hampton pumped his fist and let out a yell as he watched the ball go around the horn.

"I was real excited about it." Hampton said. "It gave me a lot of confidence for Bobby [Cox] to stay with me in that position."

John Smoltz went the rest of the way for his second two-inning save of the season. He struck out four and had to get the final out twice - Ricky Ledee struck out but reached on a passed ball, put-ting runners at first and third in the ninth.

Bell hit a liner that appeared headed for left field, but Furcal stretched out to make a leaping catch that ended the game. Smoltz kneeled on the mound and pumped his fist, savoring his 18th save in 20 chances

In what is becoming a daily occurrence. Thomas made another spectacular play in the field, too. The left fielder made a diving catch on Rollins' soft flyball in the sixth, continuing his brilliant play since being called up from the minors on June 23.

Andruw Jones chipped in with a belly flopper of his own to end the eighth.

The team was outstanding. Hampton said. "All the guys behind me deserve the credit

Arizona's Gonzalez out for season

The Associated Press

PHOENIX - Arizona slugger Luis Gonzalez will have season-ending ligament replacement surgery in early August, but is expected to return to the Diamond-acks next spring.

The left fielder will fail to drive in 100 runs in six consecutive seasons. He has torn ulnar collateral ligament in his right elbow, feeling pain on every throw. The ligament connects bones in the upper and lower arm. Head trainer Paul Lessard said it was possible for position players to recover from the operation within four to six months, compared with 12 to 16 for pitchers.

Javs' Halladav shut down

OAKLAND, Calif. - Toronto Blue Jays right-hander Roy Halladay will miss four to six weeks be-cause of a tired arm.

The American League Cy Young winner was examined Monday by Dr. James Andrews. Toronto General Manager J.P. Ricciardi said Monday there was no structural damage to Halladay's shoulder. He said Halladay (7-7, 4.35 ERA) would be re-evaluated in two weeks.

Twins' Mauer returns to DL MINNEAPOLIS — Minnesota

Twins catcher Joe Mauer was placed on the 15-day disabled list Monday with a sore left knee, his second trip to the DL this season. Mauer, eligible to be activated on July 31,missed seven weeks after tearing knee cartilage in the second game of the season

Padres acquire IF Aurilia

SEATTLE - The San Diego Padres added some infield depth, getting Rich Aurilia from the Seattle Mariners on Monday for a player to be named or cash.

Signed as a free agent in January, Aurilia, 32, hit .241 with four home runs and 28 RBIs in his first year in the AL.

Reds put Larson on DL

CINCINNATI — Brandon Larson went on the 15-day disabled list with a strained hamstring on Monday, the third time that the Cincinnati Reds' third baseman has been hurt this season. Larson pulled his left hamstring while running on Saturday.

Astros demote Duckworth

HOUSTON - The Houston Astros sent right-handed pitcher Brandon Duckworth to Class AAA New Orleans on Tuesday on the heels of his latest ineffective start and summoned nitcher Chad Qualls to take his place.

Mets trade Garcia to O's

NEW YORK - Hoping to bolster their bullnen, the New York Mets traded outfielder Karim Garcia to the Baltimore Orioles for reliever Mike DeJean on Monday.

Dodgers power to 13-1 in past 14 games

HOUSTON - Milton Bradley and Shawn Green hit back-to-back home runs in the eighth inning to lift Los Angeles to a 7-6 victory over the Houston Astros on Monday night, the Dodgers' seventh straight victory Adrian Beltre hit his career-high 24th homer for the Dodgers, who have won 13 of 14 games Winning pitcher Giovanni Carrera (2-0) allowed two runs and two hits in 11/3 innings, and Eric Gagne threw save in 27 opportunities. "It was a great victory," manager Jim Tracy said. "It was back-and-forth and we had some big step-up at-bats in the late innings by Milton and Shawn. ... We made a couple of mistakes early, but it was because we were aggressive. You can't fault that."

Dan Miceli (3-5) gave up the back-to-back homers to Bradley and Green and took the loss, which dropped new manager Phil Garner's record to 1-3 since taking over from Jimy Williams after the All-Star break. "We didn't play well," Garner said. "We had the game in the palm of our hands and we let it get away. ... It's frustrating because we put runs on the board. We just couldn't throw the ball over the plate. A pair of late home runs, that is going to happen sometimes, but you have got to throw strikes to win games."

In the eighth, Bradley homered to right on homer in the eighth to tie it. and Shawn Green followed with a homer that was the difference in the Dodgers' 7-6 victory on Monday night.

Expos 6, Pirates 2: Terrmel Sledge drove in two runs with a ground ball just past first base during a four-run seventh inning and Montreal halted Pittsburgh's 10-game home winning streak, the Pirates' longest since winning 24 straight in 1978

Marlins 6, Mets 5: Pinch-hitter Lenny Harris delivered a go-ahead single in the bottom of the ninth, spoiling Scott Erickson's bid for his first major league victory in nearly two years Miguel Cabrera tied it with an RBI single off closer Braden Looper (2-2), who gave up four straight hits in the ninth

Shane Spencer hit a three-run homer for

Cardinals 5, Cubs 4: At Wrigley Field, Scott Rolen hit a tiebreaking homer in the eighth inning off Carlos Zambrano to lead St Louis to its 12th win in 14 games.

Zambrano (9-5) was ejected in the eighth in-ning after hitting Jim Edmonds with a pitch right after Rolen's two-run shot - the second time Zambrano hit Edmonds Chris Carpenter (10-4) got his 10th victory and fourth of the season against the Cubs.

Reds 8. Rrewers 4: Wilv Mo Pena hit his sixth homer in eight games, and also had a run-scoring single and a double.

Right-hander Aaron Harang (6-2) won his second straight start against the visiting Brewers, and the Reds batted around in the first inning for four runs off right-hander Ben Hendrickson (0-2).

Padres 13, Rockies 6: Ismael Valdez pitched five-plus innings and hit a two-run double. Mark Loretta had four hits and three RBIs, and visiting San Diego set a season high for runs and matched its season high of 18 hits Giants 6, Diamondbacks 1: In Phoenix. Brett Tomko (5-5) pitched into the eighth inning, and San Francisco won without Barry Bonds, who sat out after having a root canal Monday morning.

George, Tennessee parting company

Titans' career rushing leader asks for his release after rejecting contract offer

BY TERESA M. WALKER

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Eddie George insists he isn't being greedy — he just wants to be paid close to what he's worth.

Tennessee's career leading rusher rejected the team's latest contract offer Monday and asked the Titans to release him so he can join another team before training camp.

"Change may be good," George told The Associated Press on Monday night. "I 44I hate to sever hate to sever the ties here My the ties here. first and only option was to finish My first and Tennessee only option Titan under fair circumstances. was to finish a Unfortunately, that's not how I Tennessee Titan nerceive it at this point. I look under fair to move forward in a new situacircumstances. Eddie George The Titans again declined comment Tuesday on the running back's request.

George's agent, Lamont Smith, said team officials told him they wanted to "kick it around" and get back to them.

But Titans owner Bud Adams said in May he was "pessimistic" about George returning to the team, even as General Manager Floyd Reese and coach Jeff Fisher said they hoped a deal could be

George is only the second NFL running back to rush for 10,000 yards while never missing a start, joining Jim Brown. Only Walter Payton (170) has started more consecutive regular-season games than George's 128.

Last December, George became the 17th running back to top 10,000 yards. He has 10,009 yards and 64 touchdowns for the franchise that drafted the 1995 Heisman Trophy winner 14th overall in 1996. His best season was in 2000, with fullback Lorenzo Neal, when he carried 403 times for 1,509 yards.

George is under contract through 2006 and was to make $4.25 million this season. The Titans asked him in February to rework his contract and paid him a $1 million roster bonus in March. But the salary cap-strapped Titans, whose woes are expected to worsen in 2005, need to clear space to sign 13 draft picks before training camp starts July 31.

stick close to a proposal of approximately $1.5 million this season with less money each year through 2006.

"In essence, the deal we had on the table doesn't assure me of anything but a one-year deal," George said. "I don't plan on retiring after next year."

The Titans have evolved into a pass-first offense behind Steve McNair, the NFL's co-MVP last season after leading the league with a quarterback rating of 100.4.

George has been known throughout his eight NFL seasons for his work ethic, which includes regular yoga sessions to maximize his flexibility. He had one of his best games in a couple seasons last January during a playoff victory at Baltimore when he ran for 88 yards despite dislocating his left shoulder.

He attended the team's offseason minicamps as he recovered from operations on his right knee and left ankle. But NFL teams start opening camps during the next two weeks.

George, who turns 31 in September, spoke of Tampa Bay, Philadelphia and Dallas as potential options and said he wants to join a team with a chance of winning a Super Bowl.

If the Titans release George, it would leave them with second-year rusher Chris Brown, veteran Robert Holcombe and rookies Troy Fleming, Vick King and Jarrett Payton at running back.

Pats sign first-round pick Wilfork

The Associated Press

FOXBORO, Mass. — The New England Patriots on Monday signed nose tackle Vince Wilfork, the 21st overall pick in the draft, to a six-year contract that could be worth more than $18 million. Wilfork is the second first-round pick to sign. He will be guaranteed $6.575 million through 2006, including a $3 million signing bonus and his salary for 2005-06.

Wilfork, who is listed at 325 pounds, had seven sacks in 2002 and six in 2003 at Miami. He joins a team that allowed the fewen points in the NFL last season (238) and will contend for a starting spot in the defensive line vacated by the departure of veteran Ted Washington.

Jason Babin, who was taken by Houston with the 27th overall pick, is the only other first-round pick who has signed.

Bills reach oral agreement with LB Gildon

BUFFALO, N.Y. — The Buffalo Bills have reached an oral agreement with linebacker Jason Gildon, who was let go by the Pittsburgh Steelers last month.

The one-year deal is believed to be worth between $1 million and $1.5 million, and includes a signing bonus of $500,000, according to The Buffalo News.

Gildon, a three-time Pro Bowler with 77 career sacks, is expected to be used as a pass rusher. He will be 32 on July 31.

Tagliabue agrees to new deal

NEW YORK — Paul Tagliabue will remain as NFL commissioner through the end of the 2007 sea-

Tagliabue has officially agreed to the new deal, announced last March, to extend his current contract that would have expired after next season, league officials said Monday.

Tagliabue will be 67 when the contract expires —he would have retired at 65 had he stuck to his current deal. The new one is expected to pay him around 88 million a year, putting him on a level with NBA Commissioner David Stern as the highest paid chief executives in professional sports.

The deal has been approved unanimously by the 32 owners.

Tagliabue's ability to generate television revenues and get cities to build or renovate stadiums, has made him popular with everyone — in the 15 years he's been commissioner, 21 of the 32 teams either have built new facilities or renovated older ones and the $1.76 billion television contract that expires after next season is the bieseest in soorts history.

Stewart, Foyt crash during practice session at Indianapolis

INDIANAPOLIS — NASCAR drivers Tony Stewart and Larry Foyt crashed Tuesday but neither was hurt — during testing at Indianapolis Motor Speedway for next month's Brickyard 400.

Stewart returned to the track in a different car. Stewart, fourth in the Nextel Cup driver standings, damaged the right rear of his car when he hit the wall in the second turn.

Foyt hit the wall in the first turn, damaging the car's right side. He did not return to the track because his team brought only one car for the session leading to the Aug. 8 race.

"If you had asked me in 1988 how long I would be here. I would have told you I thought I was done in '88," she said. "The key to it for me, for all these years, is still having fun. The challenge for me has been coaching myself. You have to look for challenges to keep yourself motivated.'

From Seoul to Barcelona to Atlanta, Sydney and now Athens, this devoutly religious daughter of a Baptist preacher has been a burst of sunshine in a sport too often consumed by the darkness of doping. She embraces the roles of ambassador of track and big sister to the budding young stars who surround her on the U.S. team

By chance, a doping case might give Devers the opportunity to race again in the 100 sprint, which she won in 1992 and '96 She finished fourth in the trials behind Torri Edwards, who faces a two-year ban if found guilty of using a banned stimulant.

Edwards took her case to an arbitration panel Monday, but the odds of her winning are poor. expected to endorse the recommendation.

USA Track & Field said it "regrets" the decision and will try to fight it.

The recommendation came 21/2 weeks after the Swiss-based Court of Arbitration for Sport ruled Young, the 400 world cham-pion who ran in the relay's opening and semifinal rounds, should be stripped of his gold because of a positive test for the steroid nandrolone on June 26, 1999

Young, who has denied taking a prohibited substance, was exonerated by a USATF doping appeals board on July 10, 2000.

If the whole U.S. 1,600 relay team is pun-ished, the IOC ought to start looking deeper into Olympic history and correct more blatant injustices. Open up the whole rotten Pandora's box.

Go back to 1976 and give American swimmer Shirley Babashoff the golds she was denied when she finished behind East Germans pumped up on steroids. Take a look at the East German marathoner who came out of nowhere to heat Frank Shorter. Examine the medical records and interview the East German women with bulging muscles and husky voices who won golds in 1988

When the Berlin Wall fell, the East German sports secrets started leaking out. Manfred Hoppner, the deputy director of East Germany's sports medicine machine, revealed documents that detailed the country's cheating. In 2000, Lothar Kipke, the chief doctor of the East German Swimming Federation from 1975 to 1985, was convicted of causing bodily harm to 58 swimmers with various concoctions.

Does the IOC, so eager to come down hard on the U.S. team, have the guts to probe the seamy side of the Olympics over the past three decades?

American Olympians growing old gracefully

Bhardwaj, Hatch prove women's gymnastics not just for teens anymore

BY EDDIE PELLS
The Associated Press

NEW WAVERLY, Texas — One woman likes Led Zeppelin, has been through college and spent her time before the Olympics worrying as much about bills as tumbling and twirling.

Another is coached by her husband, has lived in two countries and is well into the second phase of her career after a five-year retirement.

They are 25-year-old Mohini Bhardwaj and 26-year-old Annia Hatch, hardly typical Olympic gymnasts. They were chosen for the American team Sunday, capping comebacks after refusing to buy into the widely held notion that female gymnasts are washed up by age 20.

"I hope we've inspired some more people to come in and do this," said Bhardwaj, who listed "Led Zeppelin III," an album that came out in 1970, as the CD she'd most like to have with her if she were stranded on a desert island.

on a desert island.

Time will determine the impact these women have, but their presence on a team expected to contend for the gold in Athens is a sign that things are changing significantly in women's gymnastics, especially in the United States.

The worldwide shift toward a teen-dominated sport began in 1976, when 14-year-old Nadia Comaneci put up a handful of perfect 10s in the Montreal Games. Her coach was Bela Karolyi. And while Comaneci invigorated the sport, many gymnasts who followed didn't offer up such pretty pictures.

The image of painfully young, skinny girls prancing around the mat became common over the next 10 to 20 years. It's still common today, and conspiracy theories abound about certain countries that are willing to fudge on birth certificates to get underaged athletes — their bodies more flexible and explosive — into big-time international events.

The sport developed a reputation for chewing up and spitting out its athletes before they reached college, or often even before they hit puberty. Bhardwaj quit for a time when she was a teen, feeling she was tumbling more for her family and coaches than for herself.

"I felt a bit guilty, because in 1976, I

Mohini Bhardwaj, 25, received $25,000 from actress Pamela Anderson to help with expenses in her bid to make the U.S. team.

turned women's gymnastics into kids' gymnastics," Karolyi said. "But I realized this is not just a kids' sport. It's a beautiful sport where full-grown women will have a place to shine."

Karolyi and his wife, Martha, the U.S. team coordinator, have probably done more to shape American gymnastics than any two people over the past 20 years.

It was in 1988, four years after Mary Lou Retton won gold in the all-around and the American team won silver, that the Karolyis looked around and realized they had no experienced athletes left.

The '88 Olympic team didn't have a holdover from '84, and Phoebe Mills, who won bronze on the balance beam, saved the Americans from a medal shutout.

Annia Hatch, 26, who qualified for Cuba's gymnastics team in 1996 but didn't attend the Games, took five years off to get married and become a U.S. citizen.

Thus began a trend toward giving more opportunities to older gymnasts. While leaders of U.S. programs didn't seek out girls in their 20s, they started building programs with room for the older athletes who had before been shown the door at 18.

Bhardwaj said the disappearance of the older gymnast in the mid-1970s wasn't just an institutional phenomena. It was also a cultural reality. Most high school girls who dominate the sport in America live at home or get support from their parents.

Most women Bhardwaj's age have to pay

"Financially, it's impossible once you're done with college," she said. "It's the amount of training required for the sport. It's a lot of hours. You can't have a regular job. And if you do, you don't have time to Bhardwaj believes financial considerations are a bigger drag on the hopes of many 20-something gymnasts than physical ones, and she insists she wouldn't be here if not for the $25,000 she received from former "Baywatch" star Pamela Anderson.

On the physical side, Bhardwaj and Hatch credit a much different approach training, along with significant layoffs they had in earlier years, as the reasons they've been able to stay competitive with girls up to 10 years younger.

Bhardwaj abandoned her gym-rat tendencies when she went to UCLA, and NCAA rules required she spend no more than 20 hours in practice and meetings.

"You just learn how to spend your time more wisely," she said. Like Bhardwaj, Hatch doesn't overdo it

Like Bhardwaj, Hatch doesn't overdo it in training anymore.

She's a vault specialist but doesn't work on the event as much as most girls do, if only to save herself from enduring the kind of pounding she took when she was training and living in Cuba in the 1990s.

"Twe been there, done that," Hatch said.
"This is just another type of training that's working. You have to take into consideration that you are older, and you take longer to recuperate. It doesn't make you any less of an athlete because you keep your body healthy."

Hatch says she wasn't hurt by the five-year layoff she took after leaving Cuba to get married and become an American

While living in Cuba in 1996, she qualified for the Olympics, but the cash-strapped government didn't send her to Atlanta.

"I thought my career was over," she said. "I didn't think I was going to have a chance to be in another Olympics."

chance to be in another Olympics."

Eight years later, she made it. And she's got good company for the trip to Athens.

"If you look at any pro sport, the athletes are between 18 and 29 or 30," Bhardway asaid. "That's when you peak, mentally and physically, and that's how it should be for gymnastics. I'm not saying cut the younger ones out. I'm just saying the life span should be longer. And we're showing it's possible."

Young track talent brings fresh face to troubled sport

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — The United States will send a track and field team loaded with young talent to the Athens Olympics, fresh faces sorely needed by a troubled sport.

Thirty-two athletes under the age of 25 are on the tentative roster turned over to the U.S. Olympic Committee on Monday by USA Track & Field, the sport's governing federation.

Nine of them won events in the U.S. Olympic track and field trials, which ended on Sunday with a victory by the youngest of all—18-year-old Allyson Felix— in the women's 200 meters.

"It's just great to have so many young people on this Olympic team," said Felix, whose time of 22.18 seconds was the second-fastest in the world this year. "I'm in

The top three had the world's top three times, with 25-year-old Brenda Taylor second (53.36) and 21-year-old Lashinda Demus, of South Carolina, third (53.36).

■ Jeremy Wariner, 20, a jun-

DEAK FROM RACK RACK

Armstrong earned bonus seconds for winning the stage, extending his lead on second-place Basso to 1 minute, 25 seconds for two more days in the Alps and in a time trial on Saturday, Armstrong will pedal into the history books when the three-week cycling marathon ends on the crowd-packed Champs-Elysees in Paris on Sunday.

Armstrong said his team manager, Johan Bruyneel, was yelling into his radio-linked earpiece that he had to beat Basso.

"Johan was screaming in my ear that I had to win because of the time bonuses," Armstrong said. "Every second counts."

As overall leader, Armstrong will get the privilege of starting last for Wednesday's time trial. For the first time, the race against the clock is on the brutal ascent to the L'Alpe d'Huez ski station, a Mecca of cycling with 21 rhythm-destroying hairpin bends.

Starting last is the equivalent of pole position, allowing Armstrong to see how other riders — notably Basso — fare on the ascent.

Lance Armstrong crosses the finish line ahead of Italian Ivan Basso, left, to win the 15th stage of the Tour de France between Valreas, southern France, and Villard-de-Lans, French Alps, on Tuesday. Armstrong is five stages from becoming the first to win the Tour six times.

Armstrong takes overall lead in Alps, sets up No. 6

By JOHN LEICESTER

VILLARD-DE-LANS, France

— Lance Armstrong retook the overall lead in the Tour de France on Tuesday, outsprinting his top two challengers to win the first stage in the Alps and close in on a record sixth straight title.

Armstrong moved past Ivan Basso and 1997 Tour champion Jan Ullrich in the curves before the closing stretch to claim his second stage victory in the 2004 Tour and the 18th of his illustrious career. He also has won two team time trials.

"There's something special in winning in a sprint," Armstrong said. "To win in a sprint for me is much more intense than being

The Texan earned his 61st yellow jersey as overall leader, meaning he will overtake Miguel Indurain for third place when he wears his iersey during Wednesday's stage. Armstrong also wore yellow for one day after the team time trial July 7, but he ceded the lead to Frenchman Thomas Voeckler the next day.

"It's exciting to take the yellow jersey, even if it's number 61 or however many. It's still a thrill," Armstrong said.

Voeckler held on until Tuesday, having bravely and narrowly defended his advantage in the Pyrenees. Armstrong entered those mountains trailing by nine minutes and whittled that down to 22 seconds heading to the Albs.

Five-time Tour runner-up Ull-

rich's bid to dethrone Armstrong was hurt in the Pyrenees, but Basso appeared to still have a shot after two weeks of punishing racing.

Neither Ullrich nor Basso, though, had the strength to stay with Armstrong at the end of Tuesday's 112-mile ride from Valreas to Villard-de-Lans, including seven climbs, in heat topping 85 degrees.

Having pulled ahead of the rest of the riders, that trio — plus Ullrich's teammate Andreas Kloden — jockeyed for an edge during the closing yards, trading leads of a bicycle length or so.

In the end, Armstrong had a litthe extra, flashing past Basso on a late turn and pumping his legs to carry himself across the finish line first, pumping his fists.

Basso was credited with the same finishing time, with Ullrich three seconds behind, and Kloden six seconds back in fourth
